NEARING END
IN PANAMA

Will Raise Additional Large Sum to Finish Big Ditch

Aside from the circumstances that have led the House committee on appropriations to cut the Panama canal construction allowance in the sundry civil appropriation bill by the sum of $16,500,000, there are other and unmistakable indications that the end of the main construction is drawing near in the Panama Canal Zone, says the Christian Science Monitor editorially. For some time past there has been no increase in the force; recently there have been many reductions. It is going to be a problem of no mean dimensions for Colonel Goethals to disperse the army of workers under his command in such a manner as to prevent individual hardships, on the one hand, or a serious disturbance of economic conditions in any quarter, on the other. Hence he is proceeding with the dismantling of the force systematically and very quietly.

From the official reports it appears that approximately 45,000 names of workers on the isthmus appeared on the payrolls of the canal commission and Panama railway in June, 1911. About 5000 of these were Americans. In the latter part of the following month, or on July 28, 1911, there were actually at work 36,821 men, 27,740 on the canal proper, the remainder on the Panama railway. Since then reports of dismissals from both branches of the force have been reaching this country. Representative Page of North Carolina, in explaining the cut in appropriations referred to, and defending the appropriations committee for making it, stated the other day upon apparent high authority that within the last six months many canal employees had been discharged, and that the force retained had developed "an efficiency beyond the expectations of even the most sanguine," leaving it to be inferred that expenditures from this time on would be greatly reduced.

In the meantime, the entire proceeds of the Panama bond sale of a year ago having been exhausted, the secretary of the treasury, although fully authorized to raise an additional $136,307,000 in a similar manner to meet the cost of construction, has decided to liquidate the Panama canal bills from the general fund. The total estimated cost of the canal is $375,200,980. Up to the present time the disbursements have reached $274,908,000. It is not impossible that the chief engineer, who has greatly reduced the time of construction, has also greatly reduced the cost. It is beginning to look now as if the expenditures would fall considerably below the estimate, for with completion of the heavy work of construction drawing closer daily, there is still a margin of a round $100,000,000 to the credit of the undertaking. Secretary MacVeagh, evidently, does not believe that any such amount will be needed to carry the work through.
